TIMISM MADE THE WEST.

There was somewhat of a puritanical tinge to the Friday afternoon session of the Utah Federation of Women's clubs, which is holding its sixteenth annual convention in this city at present. Two addresses were given before the members at the Ladies' Literary club house, No. 20 Third East street, Mrs. R. W. Fisher having a paper on "The Spirit of the Puritan," and Prof. George Marshall of the state university speaking on "The Literature of Puritanism in the American Colonies."

After calling attention to the fact that nearly every phase of Puritan life has been touched upon by the writers, and referring briefly to the characteristics of the Puritan household, of which the husband was the undisputed when the specker took up her subiler, the speaker took up her sub-ct by describing a supposed return the spirit of one of the New Engand ancestors to the world of today, dicturing the view which he might ake of present day customs. She conpicturing the view which he might take of present day customs. She contrasted the laws of the Puritan times, when a mother was not even supposed to kiss one of her children on Sunday, with those of today, and said the twentieth century is doing much to place mankind on a higher plane. The meek, submissive wife of Puritan times has her representatives among the women of today but most women of today are becoming emancipated.

The paper was followed by the address of Prof. Marshall on "The Literature of Puritanism in the American Colonies." He called attention to the fact that Puritanism is a most potent force in American letters, and said that

Five Strong Reasons for Fall House Painting

1. The wood is thoroughly dry.

Paint penetrates deeper into dry wood.

The deeper it goes the better it holds. 3. Fall weather is warm, dry and dependable.

Little danger of cold, damp, rainy days which endanger the durability of paint. Wet weather decays and destroys unprotected surfaces. Lack of paint means unsightly and less valuable property.

Mrs. John Morrison of Seattle was forced to ride in a second-class coach from Portland, Ore., to Salt Lake, Aug. , after she had purchased a standard sleeper ticket, and yesterday she filed suit for $5,000 damages against the Pullman company. Mrs. Morrison says she bought a first-class ticket to Salt Lake at Seattle, and then bought a standard sleeper berth ticket at Portland. The ticket was made out for Baker City instead of Salt Lake, she claims, and that she was put off the train at Pleasant Valley, just out of Baker City. She boarded the next train, which, she says had no first-class coaches. Mrs. Morrison rode for eight hours in the second-class coach, when the conductor placed her in a standard car.
